Call for Papers

A recent study by Nature Communications has predicted the disastrous disappearance of sea ice in the Arctic Ocean by the 2030s. According to several monitoring projects, the total number of birds in North America fell by a whopping one third in the last 50 years. In India, events of massive rain have escalated three times since 1950 and the dangerous rise of the sea level is threatening the lives of a third of coastal population (ODI, 8 June, 2021). Rising temperatures, extreme weather scenario, natural disasters – these are just few snapshots of the climate catastrophe in the times of we live in.

Team Akademios (ISSN 2231-0584) solicits your contribution towards the next issue of Kamala Nehru College's multidisciplinary peer - reviewed academic journal and this year's theme is: “Decoding the Climate Emergency”. We are interested in receiving both empirical as well as theoretical research, and critical commentaries on the above theme. Submissions may be from any social sciences/humanities, commerce & science discipline and we welcome interdisciplinary reflections. Papers will be accepted from scholars, researchers, and faculty members from all institutions. The range of enquiry may be philosophical, historical, economic, geographical, political, media and cultural studies to understand the climate crisis, especially in the context of South Asia. The topics for paper submission may include, but are not limited to:

- Climate change and society
- Environmental Justice
- Economic costs of climate change
- Food security/water crisis and climate change
- Biodiversity and climate change linkages
- Human health and environment
- Climate change, migration and conflict
- Effective climate mitigation strategies, policies and governance
- Geopolitics of climate change
- Climate change in the media

- Pedagogical approach to climate crisis
- Sustainability and climate resilience
- Importance of SDG goals
- Climate crisis: the path forward

The last date for submission of all papers is September 30th 2023, 23:59 hours.

Ethics Policy:

- All articles must be unpublished. In case of simultaneous submission, the author is required to inform the journal if the submitted article is accepted for publication elsewhere.
- The journal has a strict policy against plagiarism. Authors may use appropriate software to check for duplication before submission. If plagiarism is detected, either by editorial team or peer reviewers, at any stage during the process of publication, the author will be asked to rewrite and cite resources with due diligence. The editorial team reserves the right to reject articles with extensive plagiarism (10% or more).

- The author should also be cautious regarding duplication of their own material, or self-plagiarism.

Peer-review and publication policy:

- Each submission will undergo anonymous peer reviewing from academics from the respective discipline and area of work. In some cases, two or more reviews may be sought if the first review is found to be less acceptable. The comments and suggestions of the reviewer(s) would be made available to the author as soon as they are received. The author will be required to make the necessary changes and resubmit the article. The article may be sent for review again after resubmission, especially in case the changes are found to be unsatisfactory. The entire process follows a double-blind review system, i.e. neither the author nor the reviewer is aware of the others identity.
- All deadlines for revision and submission set by the editors/editorial team must be adhered to. The team may not publish an article not received in time.
- The journal does not levy any submission or publication charges.
- Akademos is published annually and has been published annually since 2006.
- All questions or clarifications may be directed to the editors on the journal's email address: knc.akademos@gmail.com.
